CANNAS

We will have upward of half million of Cannas in three inch pots. While our assortment does not embrace all the good kinds in commerce, there is sufficient range of varieties to meet every requirement for which a Canna is needed, or can be used. "The President" is without doubt the best red in the popular price Cannas on the Market today.

For price see page 7.

Suggestions for April

Lantanas can be used in a great many ways, excellent for window boxes, makes one of the best bedding plants in position exposed to the sun, it never gets too hot for them.

Spring time is Fern time, Holly ferns for window boxes in shady places.

Begonias, Luminosa and Prima Donna make excellent pot plants and are strongly endorsed for bedding. They stand the sun well.

Ageratum Fraserii grown in a four-inch pot is something different.

Three inch pot Cannas make an immediate effect for bedding.

The President is the red Canna.

A few Kentia Palms should be carried on every place.

There is a growing demand for Holly Ferns, they sold well all last Spring in five and six inch size, some larger.

Our Salvia is grown from cuttings and come into bloom early.

Nearly everyone likes Lemon Verbenas.

Our four-inch Hardy English Ivy is in fine shape, there is a lot of ways to use good, long, bushy Ivy.

Dahlia plants gotten early and put into three-inch pots are in better shape for planting out.

FERNS

On account of our large stock of Boston, Scottii, Macawii, and Hollys we are in a position to offer our customers an exceptional fine lot of Ferns in all the different sizes we offer. SPRING PROSPECTS

Get ready for a big business. There is no reason why the bedding plant business this Spring should not be the best ever, and there are lots of reasons why it should be. Last Spring with almost every line of business in a depressed condition, everybody crying hard times coming, the Florists did a splendid business; not enough stock to supply all demands. Now with conditions greatly improved, nearly all lines getting back to normal conditions, a job for every man who wants to work, then why should there not be a good demand for pot and bedding plants? Then when we consider the fact that the glass area has not increased much during the past five years while the demand has more than normally increased.

Damaged Shipments

Every shipment should be accepted by the consignee, as the Interstate Commerce Commission has decided that every shipment becomes the property of the consignee as soon as it is delivered to a common carrier and receipted for, and that all claims for damages must originate from the delivering office, and that the carrier is responsible for all damages occurring to goods while in their possession by carelessness on the part of employer, or delay in delivering. Therefore, whenever goods are received in a damaged condition, either visible or concealed, the only proper thing to do is to accept the shipment with the notation on the receipt, "Received in a damaged condition subject to salvage." If possible, have a representative of the Express Company examine the goods at the proper time. Try to save everything possible, then present a bill for all damages and Express charges to the Agent. If this is done, there should be no trouble whatever in collecting claim.
